OUR BRISBANE LETTER.

MONDAY, JULY 3.

With the opening of the railway, the facilities for travel on the South and West line will be greatly increased. The event is expected to come off on Wednesday, and for the purposes of the travelling public the day following will be

OUR MELBOURNE LETTER.

MONDAY, JULY 3.

To-morrow is to witness the formal opening of the Mosma and Deniliquin Railway, and a large number of Victorians have accepted the invitation of the directors to take a trip over their railway and enjoy the hospitality at the northern terminus. There is a little confusion as to the arrangements for the conveyance of ladies who intend going to the ball, but I suppose all these matters will be satisfactorily adjusted. It will be unlike most celebrations of the kind, for it appears that the highest dignitaries in the land will be conspicuous by their absence. The Governor of New South Wales and his Ministers do not think it worth while to be present; and for obvious reasons, any of the political chiefs of Victoria may attend will only do so as private individuals.

Although the Ministry (with perhaps one or two exceptions) will be absent from the festivities to which they have been invited by Messrs. Collier Barry, and Co. at Deniliquin, some of them managed last week to get themselves away from their urgent public engagements in preparing for the assembling of the Parliament for the purpose of being entertained by the inhabitants of the Goulburn Valley, who are like the thousands of men from other districts, eager to obtain the advantages of railway communication.

The Premier could not get away from his work at the Treasury, which is very heavy and pressing; but the Attorney-General, the Commissioner for Railways, the Postmaster-General, and the Minister of Lands will be present, and will be able to attend to the business of the day. The Minister of Lands will be in the first place, charges of libel are not made more directly than almost any others to the personal feeling and to social predilections of those that to the unbiased judgment of a jury, or rather, while in many other cases the law is to be made clear enough to the average layman, in libel cases this is by no means so. It can scarcely be questioned that the history of libels here and elsewhere would be made to disclose interpretations of the law that are as eccentric as they are unjust. There are the oddest and most various opinions among gentlemen who sit on juries as to what should constitute a libel. It is partly attributable no doubt to a distinction which most people have not to the opportunity of putting a check on other people, to a public sensitiveness to the most intimate of criticisms when those criticisms tend to personal abuses, and to a sudden

It is a very good thing for a State to take an occasional opportunity of reminding the Press that it is its duty to conduct itself properly. This may be right enough, but we submit that it is well worthy the attention of our legislators whether such changes ought not to be made in the law which give the Judges some power of reviewing the decisions of juries which they do not seem to have now, and as will give the Government some power of offering a check to the control which the law of libel gives to one private individual over another.

At the close of last year, Mr. BRUGHAN attempted to improve the law by bringing in a Bill to prevent all private prosecutions in cases of libel, and although so sweeping a change was not approved by the Legislative Assembly, the principle that libel is an offence that the State as well as against the individual was generally acknowledged. This principle must be held to be a sound one. It can also be admitted that the difference between the criminality of an assault and that of a libel is one of practice rather than of principle. The public instance of protecting men's property and reputation is not it is surely as important that punishment for libels should be left wholly to the accidents of other individuals as that punishment for other offenses should not be so left. Whatever changes the law may require we need no better legal definition of what libel is, and some surer security that its punishment shall be less a matter of private feeling than of public justice.

at a disillustering expedition a few years ago to the north-west coast of Australia, was supposed to have left the United States destined to be sent to Britain at her most vulnerable point, the Australian colonies, the effect upon the British Government was little short of panic. With all speed they began to see to the harbour defences, construct new batteries, and buy new guns, purchase war materials, and in every possible way prepare a warm reception for the threatened invaders. The de-arrangement in our plan of defence was so great that a famous boom which was to have stretched across the opening between the Heads and raised Sydney into the heroic position of a second Londonderry. Materials for the boom were purchased at a cost of thousands of pounds, to be sold afterwards for a few hundred—and the boom is yet unconstructed. Fortunately the enemy never came. If he had, it is not British man-of-war had intercepted unity. In all probability the state of Sydney Harbour as is well known in the military and naval headquarters of Berlin, St. Petersburg, and Vienna, as in the office of the Colonial Secretary—possibly a great destroyer. Cannot every visitor who drives out to admire our beautiful scenery see our guns—the product of the late war panic—still lying on the roadside, instead of being in position ready for action? Has not Mr. Bonington asked in Parliament that we have a Permanent Force strong enough to man these guns with proper efficiency for security, as well as to the Volunteer force from which in 1900 so much was hoped and predicted—all we would know that with a few homogeneous troops the Volunteer system has degenerated into a land speculation, which has certainly produced very warlike results between the two great classes of pastoral and of sheep growers which will not use

Great Britain, like the United States, has no right to quarrel with any Power in the world.
It is in self-defence and for justice and humanity she has often had to draw her sword, and sometimes she has drawn it for ambition. The selfish, wasteful wars of the future, she will never repeat again; but she cannot strip herself of her greatness, and that greatness may excite the envy of her neighbours. Her trade exceeds that of the

On the table of the House on the evening of the 7th inst. On the following evening Mr. Lashley entered into a explanation of the proposed railway, which is to confine: strictly to passenger traffic. The goods to come from the extension is made, still be carried from the present terminal—near Redmen, and During Harbour. By a note appended to the plan of the Engineer-in-Chief for Railways, it appears that estimate of £170,000 "does not include the cost of land of the permanent passenger station building, but on
